

Living in Ayni:

Don Francisco Chura Flores, Shaman of the Andes, Shares Ancient Codes and Practices for Creating a Soaring Life

Experiential Workshop in Beaverton, Oregon
October 23-24, 2010

The Q'ero people of Peru's high Andes region live in a very special relationship with the Universe, known as "ayni." They believe that their actions in the world, more than their thoughts or perhaps even their prayers, determine the richness of life.

In this workshop, don Francisco steps into the teaching role as never before in this country, working with an interpreter to share the beauty of his heart and the wisdom of his lineage with his North American "spirit brothers and sisters."

Don Francisco will transmit the "Ayni Karpay" initiation to each class participant, and present a special gift to each person, intended to symbolize and hold the energy of the transmission. You'll also learn an ancient technique you can use at home to maintain a balanced and clear energy field.

Beverly and I are blessed to be joined by our friend Heidi Clark Reeves, who has agreed to travel from Idaho to assist in the workshop and provide Spanish translation for don Francisco. Heidi herself carries the "Mesa" stones of the Andes and brings a very special energy to the team!

The Q'ero elders have been directed by Spirit to share the ancient ceremonies they lovingly guarded for hundreds of years, since before the time of the Inca. They see modern civilization creeping into their communities and believe that the ancient knowledge must be shared with all who are ready to receive it.
